Ratepayers Meet and Discuss Situation

A meeting of ratepayers took place last Friday evening in the new temporary school house on Third Ave., to discuss the school situation.

Some time ago the School Trustees let the contract for the new school to the Alberta School Supply Co., and accepted their offer on the debentures at par at 7 per cent. The Department of Education, however, have refused to O.K. the debentures as they claim the trustees had a higher offer.

Mr. T. W. Henderson of the Department of Education, was present at the meeting and explained the attitude of the department in this matter. Correspondence from the School Trustees was read, and it was pointed out that no answer had been given by them to repeated questions asked by the department, as to why the smaller offer on the debentures had been accepted. It was also pointed out that the debentures should have been publicly advertised, and this had not been done.

Mr. Dial, chairman of the Trustee board, explained that the offer of the Alberta School Supply Co. had been accepted because the Board felt they were making a good deal, and this deal had been closed before the higher offer had been received.

A lengthy and somewhat stormy discussion followed, and no definite conclusion was arrived at. It was suggested that a resolution to the following effect be put to the meeting, "that as the requirements of the Department had not been carried out, the debentures should be advertised and sold to the highest bidder," but the chairman raised an objection and refused to put the motion to the meeting, which broke up in disorder.

Malin began to look, as she felt, very uncomfortable.

"If you don't think I can be of any use to you," she began in low voice, "of course I must go."

"Something in her tone struck Lady Moorhampton, and made him turn to look at her. After a slight pause, he said:

"On the contrary, if I rested with me, I should like you to try a few weeks with us. I am bound to say you will find the position a trying one, if you do."

"I shouldn't have thought," said Malin, taking courage, "that you were very hard to get on with, Lord Moorhampton."

"Oh, dear, no, I'm not. Not a bit. Well, the truth is, Lady Moorhampton has an odd habit of snubbing up members of her own sex and the wrong way, and since she has made it her appearance things are worse than ever in that respect. She takes unaccountable fancies and dislikes, and makes people as uncomfortable as possible."

Malin, more interested in the mystery of this position than in any word, and more attracted each moment to the man in the tones of whose voice she fancied she could detect a resemblance to those of his own, was determined not to leave the house, if she could help it, until she had found an opportunity of seeing the subject of the disappearance of Cyril.

She dared not do it yet, expecting, as she did, each moment, to see the room open and Lady Moorhampton return.

Already she detected the fact that these two were not living in perfect harmony, that the door was not closed as it was evident Lord Moorhampton submitted to the caprices of his wife, did not indicate unbroken sympathy between them. But she began to feel her way at once to the subject which was uppermost in her thoughts.

"I'm afraid I've come at an inconvenient moment," she said in a hesitating voice, with a glance which was almost involuntary at the portrait over the fireplace.

Lord Moorhampton followed the glance of her eyes and remained for a few moments as if absorbed in thought, gazing at the portrait of his wife with such an expression of profound grief upon his countenance that she could scarcely refrain from running forward and hugging him to his confused account of her adventure at the mine.

"And yet, and yet—she must not. She must hide her name."

As she said this, she herself, catching her hands and drawing her breath, Malin began to feel a little better, and Lady Moorhampton's voice speaking to someone outside the door.

"Don't be tiresome, oh, I'll get you what you want in a few minutes," a man's voice answered with a sorry tone.

"He's quick about it, then," Malin bit her lip hard and held her breath.

For the voice was that of the man who had attacked the fair-haired stranger in Mr. Fryer's office.

CHAPTER VII.

Lady Moorhampton fitted into the library and addressing Malin, said:

"Come with me, Miss West, and let me give you something to eat."

suddenly perceiving the change which had taken place in the girl's appearance, she added good naturedly: "Dear dear, you do look tired, poor thing! Well, we'll soon be at the end of our journey. I'm having some sandwiches sent for you, and in the meantime you must have a glass of wine."

Malin shook her head feebly, but Lady Moorhampton seized her arm and carried her out to the great hall, where a servant had laid the white cloth on a little gate-table by the fire. There, surrounded by a screen with a glass top, which kept out the draught and let in the light at the same time, Malin was placed on a settee, upon which Lady Moorhampton also sat down.

"Now, she said, 'I'm going' to take off my hat and gloves, and let you warm your poor hands."

"I—I'm not cold," stammered Malin.

"She did not know what she said. For she was very cold, being chilled to the bone, and so much by her journey as by the sound of that voice which she remembered so well, and by the knowledge that she was in the presence of the man whom she had believed to be, if not the murderer of the father of 'Dibs,' at least his murderer."

So she sank trembling on to the settee, a listening, shivering, and almost horror-stricken woman, with faint, dull light eyes, and a long-suffering mouth which recalled so strongly the face of Lady Moorhampton herself that Malin had no difficulty in concluding that she was right, and that Mr. Wright was her ladyship's brother.

He was standing on the tiger-skin rug not many feet away from the settee, upon which the other woman sat. He had already been placed for about half an hour in the room, and had been talking to the man whom Malin had previously seen, and who was now pulling the chair up to the settee, and Malin with a boldness which was not even in the child, as it appeared to be, also, to Lady Moorhampton, who said sharply:

"What are you doing? Did I find something to do? Take Joe into the billiard room and let him play a lump up with me."

But Joe interrupted her, shaking his head.

"No, I'm not going to play billiards. I'm going out."

"I'm going into the 'where'?"

"I've got some things to buy. And I want some money. Come, you promised to get me some."

As she spoke he nodded two or three times in a significant manner his head, and then he turned to Malin in such a confidential way, as if he were a friend of hers, that she felt, better than anyone else, as if she were a friend of hers.

"I won't admit anything except that I'm always short of money, and that I'm sure of any money, as I'm sure you must admit."

"I won't admit anything except that I'm always short of money, and that I'm sure of any money, as I'm sure you must admit."

He joined her in a menacing tone. As he spoke, his turned out, and revealed in what he believed to be a convincing fashion, the depths of his impetuosity. For he produced one penny and a key, and said: "I want five pounds. I must have it."

Lady Moorhampton, who seemed half afraid of her brother, tried to assume indignation.

"If you want it, Joe, if it were for anything reasonable," she said with dignity, "but when I know it will be used for the purpose of doing mischief to the household, I refuse to give it."

For he produced one penny and a key, and said: "I want five pounds. I must have it."

When you want anything done by me I just do it and don't ask you why. I'm sure of any money, as I'm sure you must admit."

Malin said that Lady Moorhampton was suddenly less than the other woman, she addressed again as a friend.

"Can't you give him something, just enough for today? He asked for a glass towards the butler, who came into the hall at that moment, and she said to him: 'I'm afraid I've come at an inconvenient moment,' she said in a hesitating voice, with a glance which was almost involuntary at the portrait over the fireplace."

Lord Moorhampton followed the glance of her eyes and remained for a few moments as if absorbed in thought, gazing at the portrait of his wife with such an expression of profound grief upon his countenance that she could scarcely refrain from running forward and hugging him to his confused account of her adventure at the mine."

grounds," said Joe, advancing for the purpose.

Moorhampton checked them both sharply.

"Oh, that's all doing of the sort, either of you. Miss West doesn't want to go out. She wants to see my light."

Joe rolled up his eyes.

"You know, he went on, 'with an affection of a groan. 'Well, one of them will be enough. (To Be Continued.)"

Let Your Lights Shine

The Benefit and Pleasure Derived From Proper Lighting

Perhaps if more farmers studied the question of why their boys, and their girls, for that matter, prefer city life to good, pure country life, they would find that all youth loves light and the city gives it to them. Light spells gaiety and cheer, and while the candle does throw its beam as the good deed of old, nowadays it takes the light there to be held by the youth under its beams.

Russia's Meat Supply

Asiatic Portion of Empire Supplies the European Half

Much of the meat for European Russia comes from Siberia. From November to April it may be shipped in a frozen train to the large towns of the cities. It is of course, not as good frozen as it would be if merely chilled. In warm weather, on the contrary, live animals have to be shipped to the centres of consumption and slaughtered there. For lack of refrigeration and cold storage at these centres the meat must be sold in long and slow transportation, and to offset the losses by spoiling after slaughtering. The poorer classes in the large towns can eat but little meat in hot weather because of its high cost. In the refrigeration of meat certain important shipping lines have done wonders with the use of natural ice and special packing. But on the whole, Russia is in the position of America, not so long ago, in the situation of perishable goods. It is not spread out to meet the demand, in consequence the range of prices is great.

Value of Good Roads

Bringing the Farmer Within Easy Reach of Town and in Close Touch with Neighbors

Economists are agreed that the increased prosperity of the Western Canadian lands is a large extent in finding the farmer in close touch with his neighbors. There is no certain important shipping lines have done wonders with the use of natural ice and special packing. But on the whole, Russia is in the position of America, not so long ago, in the situation of perishable goods. It is not spread out to meet the demand, in consequence the range of prices is great.

THE PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

This Fertile Area of Canada's Hinterland Described in a New Booklet

The demand for accurate and reliable information with regard to the Peace River country is widespread, and is rapidly becoming more insistent. Every effort, therefore, that may be made to provide this information through official sources is both timely and valuable.

A booklet entitled "The Peace River Country" just issued by the Department of the Interior dealing with information with reference to this new land have been dependent on reports of a more or less fragmentary nature, gathered from any source that happened to be available. In compiling authentic information from reliable sources and publishing it in the form of a booklet, the Department has provided a much needed source of information for all who are or who may become interested in the Peace River country.

While a few pioneer settlers have from time to time penetrated this portion of Western Canada, it has only been within the past few years that it has been possible to regard the great Peace River valley as within the grasp of the modern world.

In taking in supplies and machinery and the corresponding task of marketing the crop rendered this fertile area of Canada's hinterland virtually "inaccessible."

Although but few have explored this district, many will be surprised to learn that so long ago as 1876

Vegetables attain a large size. During a large part of the winter season the cattle and horses may remain outdoors. It is a country adapted both to the farmer and the stockman.

A copy of the booklet may be obtained by addressing the Railway Lands Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Spent Countless Nights Unable to Rest or Sleep

Was Run Down and in Terribly Nervous Condition—By Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Gained Regularity

In this letter is told once more the story which comes from the mouths of so many women. It is the story of exhausted nerves, of a run-down system and of all the accompanying misery of sleeplessness, headaches, loss of energy and vigor.

But there is a silver lining to this cloud. There is the light of new hope and courage which are daily received by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This letter is so representative of the kind we are daily receiving that you can judge from it what you might expect from this treatment under similar circumstances.

Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R. R. No. 1, Millerton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat. Could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting. My limbs would not so badly that it hurt me to walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams; in fact, I was almost without a thought of sleep, and started up at once. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food brought me back to normal, and I gained regularity.

"It was not long before I began to feel the benefit of this treatment, and can truthfully say it has done me a great deal of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a first baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

You are not asked to expect miracles from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, but if you are willing to get back your exhausted nerves to health and get the nervous system restored, you can get the good food to produce the desired results. $5.00 a box, $25.00 a dozen, or Edmondson, Bibles & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Aerial Trick That Won

British Aviator by Looping the Loop Brought Down a German Zeppelin

Before the war, exhibition flights, in which "looping the loop" was the great stunt, packed our action drama grounds with holiday sightseers. The performances at that time were considered nothing but a freak of nerves and reckless daring—"circus tricks" and "barnstorming." Its possible utility was scoffed at. "Looping the loop" has proved to be a valuable air battle evolution.

By looping the loop, a British aviator has brought about the defeat and destruction of an enemy zeppelin, last July.

Hallum, the aviator, was patrolling with any success, so he decided performing the "looping the loop," which would bring his zeppelin into the German aviator's notice. The German aviator noticed the trick and as he was not the least prone to escaping, he met the last performer. Well aware that he was a capital target for the British aviator, he moved in all directions to lessen the danger to his life. He was followed by the aviator following all the movements. The German aviator was not to be again looped the loop, coming within one hundred feet below the enemy. The British pilot commenced firing and after a short battle he hit the zeppelin in its vital gas bag, setting it on fire. The German aviator was killed and the zeppelin was destroyed.

The Last Asthma Attack may be taken. Dr. D. J. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy will safeguard you. It will prevent the attack, and it will chase and bring about a healthy condition. It always cures, and its continued use often effects a permanent cure. Why not get this long-famous remedy today and control your cough? Inhalant as smoke or vapor is equally effective.

Overcoming the Roads As a nation, so motor cars multiply, the more evident it is that constant care by motorists is required. The highways are not being widened proportionately. There is a continuing greater demand for the available road space. Suppose a million cars and a million trucks come on the market next season. Many of these will be operated by inexperienced drivers. There will be many accidents, of course. One of the most serious is the one involving careless drivers. It is not safe to drive a car at any moment run into him—Editorial in Providence Journal.

The Market Report

Supplied by Randall, Gie & Mitchell, Limited, Winnipeg

A very positive feature of the wheat market is the fact that conditions now existing is that the wheat is more abundant than to bearishness. The underlying condition is bullish, and this will not prevent price fluctuations. The market is now in a position to maintain the price of wheat to any permanent decline is a criterion, the beginning of the third harvest in the European struggle finds the wheat position the strongest it has been since that eventful year of 1914. In two out of three seasons wheat has been the highest price of any grain. In 1914 it might well be said that the breadstuffs needs of the world were almost wholly supplied on this continent, and while 1915 is a year of great demand, the surplus producing countries, the present season is one of disappointment. The wheat market has been the first of last July has been a most remarkable one. There have been several bull periods before, but it is very doubtful if there has been a more successful one based on such substantial grounds. The trade has never seen a market where it has recorded so great an advance ostensibly on the basis of speculation, accompanied by such speculation "wheat" failed to turn sharply in the other direction and record a decline almost equal to the advance. It indeed it did not show a loss greater than the upturn. It is the firm undertone of the market at the higher level that is most impressive. It is a confirmation of the strong commercial position of wheat independent of speculation. Few will dispute that previous to last week there was a decided shift in speculative sentiment to the short side. This movement was accompanied by a sharp decline in prices, which has shown such marked hesitancy to go higher. Based on the history of previous years, it is not surprising that the market has shown such marked hesitancy to go higher. Based on the history of previous years, it is not surprising that the market has shown such marked hesitancy to go higher.

Britain's Amazing Inventions The British are manufacturing new inventions "which could turn the Krupp's green with envy," according to Dr. Benjamin Rand, Harvard University, who returned to New York recently from a visit to England.

Accorded privileges of inspection by the British Foreign Office, Dr. Rand said he visited munition and machine factories and saw "some of the most astounding inventions," but that he was pledged not to disclose their nature. He found among every class of men, an intense determination to do something to win the war. In one factory he saw 7,000 women at work unimpeded in khaki.

New factories were being built, he said, and existing ones constantly extended.

Recent Northern Ontario Forest Fire the Third Most Serious Fire Catastrophe on Continent

The Northern Ontario forest fire of July 29, last, ranks as the third most serious fire catastrophe in the history of this continent. This statement is made by the Canadian Forestry Association. The fire, which broke out in the township of Hamilton, Ontario, in 1825, was responsible for 418 lives and the burning of over 100,000 acres of forest.

In 1825 occurred the Mimiwhi fire of New Brunswick and Maine, which destroyed 1,200,000 acres of forest. An Equitable Right

Granting of the Franchise to Women Is a Step Forward in History

Canada represents a vast Dominion in which justice and equal rights to all are emblematic of the freedom afforded the citizen within her confines. But it is justice exemplified in the womanhood are from a standpoint ranked with the criminal.

Manitoba has within recent days reversed the shackles of such dark ages. Her womanhood are from a standpoint ranked with the criminal. But it is justice exemplified in the womanhood are from a standpoint ranked with the criminal.

Buy At Home

"Red towns are not made by men afraid."

Let schoolboys also get ahead. When everyone works and nobody shirks.

You can raise a town from the dead.

And if while you make your personal stake.

Your neighbor can make one too.

Your town will be what you want to see.

It isn't your town—it's YOU.

The habit of purchasing from Mail Order Houses has been the subject of innumerable controversies and at the present time is being discussed by nearly every community in Canada.

The city of Calgary is giving widespread publicity to a "Buy At Home Campaign" and advocates sound arguments why "the dollar" should be kept at home.

In these strenuous times, careful thought should be given to the subject of buying at home. Do you want your town to be the liveliest and best? The success of any town depends almost entirely on the efforts of its citizens, and any movement for the betterment of the town and district should receive the hearty co-operation of all.

Surely, then, a "Buy at Home" campaign should receive the earnest consideration of all.

Thousands of dollars, which we believe might well stay here, are being sent out of town every month. One reason frequently advanced is that they cannot get what they want in town. We are under the impression that if the local merchants received the wholehearted support of the entire community they could supply all requirements as readily as any mail order house.

Every dollar which is sent to mail order house is a dollar lost to this community. Keep the money at home and help in the development of your district.

The School Question

The ratemakers meeting held last Friday evening, did not materially assist in clearing up a somewhat chaotic state of affairs.

The Department of Education are dissatisfied with the manner in which the local board have disposed of the debentures, and apparently will not O.K. the sale of the debentures as they stand at the present time.

The action of the chairman of the meeting in blocking a suggested motion "that the debentures be publicly advertised and sold to the highest bidder," has been criticized. The Chairman's contention is that it is unfair to force his hand and make him go back on his word to the Alberta School Supply Co.

But as the Minister of Education must first approve of the sale of debentures before the contract is binding, and as the Alberta School Supply Co. must know this—they could not justly feel that Mr. Dial is showing any breach of faith with them.

Building operation are now apparently at a standstill, and if the school is to be completed at an early date, it is evident that the requirements of the department will have to be carried out.

Interesting Letter From
Pte. P. E. Meehan

The following letter was received by Edgar Clemens, and gives an interesting account of a local soldier's experience in the firing line.

Queen Mary's Hospital,
Whalley, Lancs., Eng.
Sept. 21th, '16

Dear Edgar:

Haven't written to you for quite a long time, and so my time hangs pretty heavily with me just now, will make you "the goat" and pass some time away writing a letter. By the heading you will see I am in "blighty" (England) again and in a military hospital. It is the largest military hospital in England, having between 3,000 and 4,000 beds and needless to say everything is in "apple pie order" and we got the very best care and treatment.

I was put out of commission in the big advance scored on the 15th and 16th all along the Western front on the Somme. The Canadians were on a four mile front, and carried two complete lines of German trenches, and in some places four trenches, also a fortified town called Courcellette and hundreds of prisoners. The "Pats" were right at the town on the left, and the 25th Batt'n on the right. It was a hard job to get it but we finally gained control.

We were in action on Friday and Saturday and while the success was great it was bought at a fearful and appalling price. Every battalion engaged, lost tremendously, our battalion must have lost almost half its number in killed and wounded. I was hit by a piece of shrapnel from a shell that broke right on the trench a short distance from me, late on Saturday night. The Germans were raining a terrible bombardment on their lost trenches, preparatory to a counter attack. The shell that hit me killed two and seriously wounded others. Luckily only a small piece of shell entered my right leg, I was almost covered with dirt. I am almost deaf from the explosion. We lost the greater part of our officers in killed or wounded. I don't know how Lieut White, who comes from north of Cered, made out, or Breden either.

We bivouacked on a large field near Albert early Friday morning and hadn't the slightest idea that before night we would be in the front, let alone in the German trenches. Company One had been up near our front lines the night before in a working party and didn't get back till the "wee small hours" of the morning. We had just finished a cold breakfast when the sergeant-major came running up and gave us orders to dress "battle order." In a hurry and in a short time the entire battalion was on the move. We stopped for a hastily eaten dinner and then kept on and never stopped until we had captured the first German trench, except to change magazines and fix bayonets. Believe me it was going into action on the double, but after the strenuous times we have been having in France, we are as hard as nails, and not a man dropped out on the march. If it hadn't been for the severe training half of us wouldn't have made it at the pace we were legging it.

The try over "no man's land" close to the ground lying between our front line and the Germans was terrible. The ground was covered with dead bodies, some of them literally blown to pieces, and it was a common sight to see different parts of a body lying separate. We lost a considerable number of our fellows before reaching the German trenches, but when it came hand to hand "Fritz" lost heart and threw up the sponge, and those who wouldn't beat it surrendered. After waiting for our artillery to lift us in their second line, we went over again and it was here that we got a severe gunning, but nevertheless kept right on and gained their trench and got a good foothold. We then worked down the trenches with tommy rifle and bayonet and finally gained control. The town of Courcellette lies a little to the right and that fell into our hands. The 25th Battalion have the greater part of the town at their objective. We captured some machine guns and hundreds of prisoners.

After the Germans knew that the trenches were in our hands they opened up with their artillery, and knowing the exact range, the shells burst right in the trenches, and we suffered appalling losses. About midnight Saturday I had to leave for the dressing station and don't know how things went on after I was hit. When I left they were still digging themselves in in a new line of trenches in advance. The "Pats" were to be relieved by another battalion early that morning. All the battalions suffered terrible losses, but it was a great advance secured for the Seventh Brigade and it is success that counts.

The Red Cross is simply wonderful in its organization. I left the front line after midnight and had to be taken over three miles on foot when the ambulances were, nevertheless I was in Boulogne hospital at eleven o'clock next night. Stayed there until after dinner Monday and then crossed to Dover and by another Red Cross train to the above address. This is a small place near Manchester, and it is the largest military hospital in England. It goes without saying, that we have the finest treatment obtainable. I came out lucky as only one piece of shrapnell shell entered my leg, and didn't touch any bones, but it sure was painful enough. If all goes well I will be up and doing in a short time and ready to go to France for another go.

With best wishes and regards to Mr. and Mrs. Clemens, the girls and Harold.

Yours sincerely,
Pat. E. Meehan

New Government Maps

There has just been issued by the Department of the Interior a new edition of the "Land and Pre-emption" map which gives useful and interesting information, corrected to a recent date, with regard to the land situation and the pre-emption and purchased homestead areas throughout the three Western provinces.

Figures in green show at a glance the number of quarter-section in each township that are still available for homestead entry, also the area within which quarter-sections may be pre-empted. Boundaries of Dominion Land Agencies, and the location of Forestry and Indian Reserves are also clearly shown. All townships which have been surveyed are set out in a distinctive buff coloring.

Copies of the publication may be obtained free of charge upon application to the Railway Lands Branch of the Interior, Ottawa.

Homestead Regulations

The question of proving up on homesteads entered upon by men who have since been killed in action has been under consideration by the department of the interior at Ottawa for some time. It has been decided that where the entry has been secured after enlistment the estate of the dead man is called upon to complete the cultivation regulations and to erect a habitable house, though not called upon to complete the years of residence.

In the case where entry has been made before enlistment patent will be issued to the heirs of the dead man without further duties.

Dominion Wide Appeal to Women

R. B. Bennett, head of the National Service Commission, returned to Ottawa last Monday. Mr. Bennett states that women's organizations will be formed throughout Canada for the purpose of making appeals to the womanhood of the Dominion to take the place of men of military age in the institutions of the country.

Four Austro-German Battalions Annihilated

The Austro-German forces have retired from the region of Campulung. In Northern Rumania, pursued by the Rumanians, who have passed over the frontier in the movement, according to a despatch from Bucharest.

Four hostile battalions were annihilated by the Rumanians.

A One Man Tractor

The most powerful 3 Plow Tractor in the world. The Bates Steel Mule is the most powerful Tractor in the world of the three plow class.

With a draw bar pull on its plowing speed of over 3,200 lbs. it gives a reserve power to draw on which will pull its three plows through almost any kind of soil, at a good speed.

When this power is compared to the 1000 lbs. to 2000 lbs. that three plow tractors usually have at their plowing speed, it can readily be appreciated by comparison that the Bates Steel Mule not only is the most powerful three plow tractor in the world, but is so with a large margin to spare. And further more because of its transmitting its power through the ground to its draw bar by means of a "Crawler" instead of a wheel. This big power is available in the Spring when the soil is molten, and when under the same conditions the pull of a wheel tractor might drop to less than 500 pounds.

The "Crawler," together with the Compound Lever Hitch, makes the Bates Steel Mule just as powerful a puller in the Spring when the ground is molten and soft, as in the Fall when the footing is dry and hard.

It does everything that horses do, and does it better, quicker and cheaper. It burns kerosene or gasoline. For full particulars write or see—

Oil Pull Means This

FUEL at one-half the price means lower operating costs, smaller upkeep expenses and bigger profits.

Bear in mind that the Oil Pull is the only tractor that will successfully burn kerosene and heavier oil fuels at all loads, under all conditions—all the time.

The Oil Pull, through deep plowing and thorough soil working, is increasing crops for a great many Dixie owners—in some cases doubling them. Burning kerosene, the Oil Pull adds this increase to your bank account at the lower possible cost.

A more dependable tractor than the Oil Pull can't be bought and you will find it able to take care of all your power jobs, whether draw-bar or belt. Two sizes; 13-30 and 30-60 horsepower.
